

HOW SOME OF PRINCETON'S PATRIOTIC STUDENTS ARE PREPARING TO UPHOLD THE STARS AND STRIPES

Filling up for a scouting flight. The aviation squad is an important one.

Above—Mastering the many-sided angles of modern battle trenches. Where brawn and sturdy backs have plenty to tax them.

To left—Two of the machines and hangars at Princeton. The aviation school has a membership of nearly one hundred.

Learning how to make as well as to demolish wire entanglements. Nine-tenths of the students at the University are qualifying for war service.

Lungs, heart and legs put to a test. Student infantrymen charging up a steep slope.

Student soldiers at Princeton returning from a practice hike. They are an upstanding, sturdy lot of youths.

Photos, Central News Photo Service.

Bayonet drill. Despite the reach of modern ordnance, cold steel is the final arbiter of victory.